IS A LAND OF CONTRARIES.

Some of the Many Things Which the Chinese Do the "Other Way." Nearly all the older writers, especially Heylin, Goering, Menlin, Mandeville and the two Herriotts, frequently refer to China as "the land of contrarities" and "the land of opposites." These names seem to have been well applied, names seem to have been well applied, for, according to the Philadelphia Press, it is a well-known fact that the people of the Celestial empire do nearly everything contrary to the way in which it is done in other parts of the world. Here are a few striking illustrations. We shake hands with each other, the Chinaman shakes hands with himself. We uncover the head as a mark of respect, the Chinaman not only remains with head covering in place, but removes his shoes if he wishes to appear very, very polite. We shave the face, they the head; we cut the nails of the lingers, they consider it ultra-aristocratic to lot them grow several inches in length. they consider it ultra-aristocratic to let them grow several inches in length. The Chinaman not only wears his shirt outside of his trowsers, but whitens his shoes instead of blackening them. We bury in the earth, they on the surface; and white is their badge of mourning. In the "land of opposites" it is the old men who fly kites, walk on stilts, play marbles, and shoot fire-crackers. With us the right hand is the place of honor; with them it is the left. place of honor; with them it is the left. We live cook and eat on the ground floor and sleep upstairs; with this con-trary nation the reverse is the general trary nation the reverse is the general rule. In dainty letters we write the year last; they place it first. We pay our doctors when we are sick; they pay as long as they remain well, but as soon as they fall sick the pay stops. Here men kill their enemies; a Chinaman gets reveage by killing himself. A full hundred things could be mentioned which they do opposite to the manner in which it is done in other parts of the world; however I will close this "curiosium" by adding that they launch ships sideways, ring bells fom the outside of the building, and actually turn screws in a contrary direction.

A CHECK FOR FOUR CENTS. As a Curiosity It is Worth More Than Its New York Herald.

A well known Wall street broker, whose office is in the Schermerhorn building, has pasted in a conspicuous place in his private office a little piece of paper which even upon the "street" is regarded as a great financial curiosity. It is a check drawn upon a New York national bank for four cents and York national bank for four cents and has been certified.

It is a rule with all banks that when the paying teller certifies by his signature upon a check drawn by a depositor, that there are sufficient funds in the bank to meet the check when presented for payment, he does so with the understanding that the check, if not used and returned to the bank through the ordinary channel of business, the clearing house, shall be re-deposited as though it were cash by the drawee. If a certified check fails to find its way back to the bank on which it is drawn the paythe bank on which it is drawn the pay-ing teller's daily sheet, and consequent-ly the books of the bank will not bal-

This four cent derelict-the bank accountants probably have a stronger name for it—has now been "out" sevname for it—has now been "out" several years, and is probably a constant cause of irritation to the bank people, who must now of necessity take a balance four cents out of the way as a true one. It is not known what means the drawes of this check used to induce the teller to certify it, but they were undoubtedly potent ones, as may be learned by any one who will present for certification a check for any way near a like amount, even though the drawes's name be good for ten thousand times the amount at the bank at which it is presented. The teller would probably hold it and give a "cashier's check" for a like amount, like that he could take cash—or do the other thing.

The bank would most likely pay a considerable premium to get hold of that four cent check, as once did the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" in an instance of this kind recorded by a writer in the London Notes and Queries for July 1, 1882. By some misadven-ture a note for one penny stamped with the "promise to pay" of the Bank of England got into circulation in 1818 and "for many years gave the cashiers much trouble with their accounts." "About fifteen years ago," says the writer in Notes and Queries, "it was brought to the bank, but the owner, not unwisely, would not take a penny for it, and I believe the bank settled transaction by giving him five

SANITARY EFFORTS.

How Co-Operation of Citizens Saved a Lou don Parish from Cholera.

Washington Star. On the occasion of the visitation of the city of London by the cholera some years ago various meetings of clergy of the Church of England were convened in that city to hear suggestions and instructions from well known sanitary authorities as to the help the clergy might give in aiding the taking of precautions to keep out the cholers, or at least to keep its ravages within some possible bounds in their respective parishes. At one of these meetings a young At one of these meetings a young clergyman was present who was much impressed with what he heard. Going back to his own parish in South London, with a population of 0,000, mostly poor and altogether of the mechanic class, he called some of his workers together that night and formed them into a compilities of written and the mining of the compilities of writing the constitution. gether that night and formed them into a committee of visitation. He pointed out how important it was to remember the old adage which says "It is better to lock the stable door before the steed is stolen," and therefore it was better to prevent the arrival of the cholera than to abate its progress. As municipal authorities were sure to move slowly it would be better to take some steps immediately, and he proposed the next day that a visitation should be made to the house of everybody who made to the house of everybody who could contribute a small sum toward the expense of a sanitary committee, which should make a visitation of the whole parish in the interest of sanita-

The proposal was eagerly taken up and by the next evening a considerable sum of money had been raised in small amounts for the purpose of the sanitary committee. The whole parish was divided into shall districts. Every house was visited, the people were told friends and neighbors had come to belp them without authority of police or inspectors to endeavor to prevent the spread of cholera in their midst, and asked that they might be allowed to visit closets, privies; ssh heaps, collections of garbage, etc., and remove the same, whitewash all outbuildings and using carbolic acid and other disinfectants. Without a single exception everyone allowed the work to be done, even in the very roughest districts. Quantities of disinfectants were kept at the parish building, where anyone could obtain a supply, etc.

What were the results? The whole parish was not a mile across in any one direction. Within its boundaries there was not a single case of cholera during the whole visitation, while just across its boundaries there were many cases, the rector of the cleansed parish being often called upon to minister to dying people in the uncleansed district.

The names of the rector and parish are well known to the writer of this article, which is written with the sole hope that many in this land will go and do likewise; not wait till the scourge is here, but cleanse the house and keep out of the danger.

What Prayer Will Do.

"One night last week my little girl, of prayer.

"One night last week my little girl, who is about a dozen years old, reminded me that she needed a pair of new shees to make complete her Easter Sunday costume. I was interested in my newspaper and made some badgering remarks about the duty of children to wear brogans at $1 a pair, and gave her a dollar. She went away without a word, a fact that surprised me, because I thought she would protest. But finally she came to me and said:

"l'apa, I'll match you for another dollar—heads I win, tails you lose.'

"The proposition nearly knocked me off my chair. I looked across the room at her mother, a devout woman, from whom I expected an emphatic lecture. She, however, was paying no attention, and so I said: 'Don't you know it's wrong to gamble? Where on earth did you hear of matching dollars?"

"Oh, I found out, was her eyasive renly. "Will you match me?"

"Well, you know me. I don't take any bluffs like that, so I out with a silver dollar and laid it on my knee. The child was about to follow suit, when she hesitated, drew away, and then went to her mother and said, with much solemnity:

The stock market was dull and the fluctuations.

The stock market was dull and the fluctuations in prices were generally slight. The interest taken in the naval pageant, and the fact that the exchange will be closed to-morrow, tended to curtail operations. In spite of the dullness, however, a firm tone characterized the dealings, purchases being stimulated by the further reduction in the rates of sterling exchange the that no gold exports are to be expected by tomorrow's or Saturday's steamers. A majority of stocks closed fractionally above last night's figures. Reading was especially strong, and tward the closes sold at 25, against 24% at the opening; favorable reports in regard to the plan for funding the floating debt were instrumental in causing the advance, which had a sympathetic effect on the general list. The grangers were in demand and closed at the top figures. Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan broke 5% to 13%, and railied 4% per cent. The market closed firm in tone, with an improving tendency. Haliroad bonds were strong. Sates $1,146,000. Government and state bonds dull.
